What purposes can leave be used for?	Medical leave can be used for a worker's own serious health condition. Family leave can be used (1) to bond with a child within one year of the child's birth or placement; (2) to care for a family member with a serious health condition; (3) to address certain military family needs; or (4) following the death of a child in certain circumstances. Specifically, family leave can be taken "[d]uring the seven calendar days following the death of the family member for whom the employee: (i) [w]ould have qualified for medical leave . . . for the birth or their child; or (ii) [w]ould have qualified for family leave" to bond with a child within one year of the child's birth or placement.
Who is covered? California, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Washington State, Massachusetts, and Connecticut also provide some coverage for previously covered workers who have a qualifying need for family or medical leave while they are unemployed, while New York and Hawaii also provide some coverage for previously covered workers who have a qualifying need related to the worker's own health. Details vary by state. States that aren't currently implementing their programs will also likely provide some coverage for previously covered workers during unemployment, though final regulations will be needed to specify details	All employees are covered.
Are public sector workers automatically covered? Note that no state law covers federal employees.	Yes.

Are workers entitled to have their jobs back when they return?	Yes, but only for workers who meet specific eligibility criteria similar to those for the FMLA. Workers are entitled to job protection under the state paid family and medical leave law only if they work for an employer with at least 50 employees, have been employed by that employer for at least 12 months, and have worked for that employer for at least 1,250 hours during the 12-month period immediately preceding leave. A worker entitled to job protection under the law must be restored to the worker's prior position or "an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment." Some highly paid employees may be subject to a very narrow exception. Workers who receive health insurance through their employers are entitled to continuation of those benefits while on leave if their employers would be required to continue benefits under the Family and Medical Leave Act. Workers may have protections under other laws, such as the FMLA.
How is the insurance provided?	By default, workers are covered by the state fund. Employers can apply for approval of a voluntary plan, which must provide benefits at least equivalent to those available through the state.
